527: RMS Republic Soup Bowl. White Star Line. USD 300 - 500

White china, 9.25"diameter, Conservation Technology Group label on verso. Built in 1903 by Harlan and Wolff in Belfast (the same builder which built the Titanic), White Star Lines' RMS Republic was lost at sea in a collision in 1909. The ship's newly developed Marconi wireless telegraphy transmitter was credited for saving 1,500 lives. Sister to the Titanic, the Republic was known as the "Millionaires' Ship"because of the number of wealthy Americans who sailed on her. The wreck of the Republic was found by Captain Martin Bayerle in 1981. She lies upright approx.50 miles south of Nantucket Island in 270 feet of water. Ironically, it was less than three years later that the Titanic sank while following a similar route taken by the Republic. Recovered artifacts from the Republic were documented by the Conservation Technology Group, Newport, Rhode Island. That Group's conservation label with individual Artifact Registration # was then affixed to the items. Only a small number of RMS Republic recovered artifacts were ever placed for sale. The ones being offered here were initially sold at a 1988 nautically-themed auction held in conjunction with Newport's Museum of Yachting. Three quarters of a century under water certainly has affected the condition of these artifacts but they are, unquestionably, rare and historic. This is an unreserved auction with no minimums. This is an online only sale. Items may be viewed upon appointment in New York City. Condition: Small area of chips on verso only. Notice to bidders: More detailed condition reports and additional photographs are available by request. The absence of a condition report does not imply that the lot is in excellent condition. Please message us through the online bidding platform or call Guernsey's at 212-794-2280 to request a more thorough condition report.

Ironically, it was less than three years later that the Titanic sank while following a similar route taken by the Republic. Recovered artifacts from the Republic were documented by the Conservation Technology Group, Newport, Rhode Island. That Group's conservation label with individual Artifact Registration # was then affixed to the items. Only a small number of RMS Republic recovered artifacts were ever placed for sale. The ones being offered here were initially sold at a 1988 nautically-themed auction held in conjunction with Newport's Museum of Yachting. Three quarters of a century under water certainly has affected the condition of these artifacts but they are, unquestionably, rare and historic. This is an unreserved auction with no minimums. 568: Pre-Castro Cuban Cigars. USD 2,000 - 3,000

Flor de F. Farach, sealed box of 100 Farachitos (small cigars), c. 1958. In December, 1983 an unprecedented auction was held of thousands of pre-Fidel Castro Cuban cigars. The sale was conducted at New York City's prestigious Park Avenue Armory with the permission of the U.S. State Department. It was the first time the U.S. Government lifted the Embargo placed on Cuban products. We are not aware that any other Cuban products have legally been allowed into the U.S. since the 1983 auction and hence believe that the cigars that were sold more than 35 years ago were indeed the only Cuban products to be allowed into the U.S. since Castro's takeover in 1959. Original wooden Cuban cigar box, 4" x 4' x 14", with several intact gold-printed seals and the official seal of the Republic de Cuba. "Todo Hecho a Mano, Habana" impressed into the wood. The box contains 20 smaller boxes each containing five Farachitos. The Farachitos are 3.25" long. There are 100 Farachitos in all. This particular box is number 190282 Series G. An American gentleman had inherited this collection of Cuban cigars which had been stored in Spain by a relative. Unable to import the cigars into the U.S. because of the Embargo, the American went to the auction house which in turn presented the situation to the State Department. The argument was that proceeds from the sale of the cigars would stay in the U.S. and not impact the Cuban economy. The State Department agreed and the Embargo was lifted this one time for the auction. The cigars were made in Havana (Habana) by Farach, a brand unknown in the U.S. but well-regarded in Europe. The news of the 1983 auction appeared on the front page of the New York Times which reported that consistently the boxes of cigars fetched thousands of dollars which equated to individual cigars going for hundreds of dollars each! We have been present when, over the years, cigars from that auction have been smoked. The consistent reaction is that the qualities that allowed pre-Castro Cubans to be considered the "gold standard" upon which all other cigars are judged have been retained through the decades. This is an unreserved auction with no minimums. This is an online only sale. Items may be viewed upon appointment in New York City. Collectors' Odyssey - Day 2 (Feb 21)

579A: Pre-Castro Cuban Cigars. USD 2,000 - 3,000

Flor de F. Farach, sealed box of 100 Farachitos (small cigars), c. 1958. In December, 1983 an unprecedented auction was held of thousands of pre-Fidel Castro Cuban cigars. The sale was conducted at New York City's prestigious Park Avenue Armory with the permission of the U.S. State Department. It was the first time the U.S. Government lifted the Embargo placed on Cuban products. We are not aware that any other Cuban products have legally been allowed into the U.S. since the 1983 auction and hence believe that the cigars that were sold more than 35 years ago were indeed the only Cuban products to be allowed into the U.S. since Castro's takeover in 1959. Original wooden Cuban cigar box, 4" x 4' x 14", with several intact gold-printed seals and the official seal of the Republic de Cuba. "Todo Hecho a Mano, Habana" impressed into the wood. The box contains 20 smaller boxes each containing five Farachitos. The Farachitos are 3.25" long. There are 100 Farachitos in all. This particular box is number 193901 Series A. An American gentleman had inherited this collection of Cuban cigars which had been stored in Spain by a relative. Unable to import the cigars into the U.S. because of the Embargo, the American went to the auction house which in turn presented the situation to the State Department. The argument was that proceeds from the sale of the cigars would stay in the U.S. and not impact the Cuban economy. The State Department agreed and the Embargo was lifted this one time for the auction. The cigars were made in Havana (Habana) by Farach, a brand unknown in the U.S. but well-regarded in Europe. The news of the 1983 auction appeared on the front page of the New York Times which reported that consistently the boxes of cigars fetched thousands of dollars which equated to individual cigars going for hundreds of dollars each! We have been present when, over the years, cigars from that auction have been smoked. The consistent reaction is that the qualities that allowed pre-Castro Cubans to be considered the "gold standard" upon which all other cigars are judged have been retained through the decades.
